Cottage Home.

The grass-plat green, before the door, The porch with vines o'er grown, Were lovaly as they were before, When that cottage was my own.

Ch! Rum seller, that home, that home of thine.

That pleasant home, that happy home, That cottage home was mine.

The gravel walk so white and straight, With flower banks on each side, That led down to the wicket gate, Where Willy used to ride. The locusts o'er the path that grew, The willow boughs that swayed, All told me with a tale most true, That there my Mury played.

The silver lake so calm and clear, Along whose bank I've strayed So often with my Lucy dear, To watch the sunlight fade. The pearly streams that sweetly run, The garden's foot along, And murmuring fount as bright as then

All sang the mournful song.

Oh: Rum seller, &c.

Oh! Rum seller, &c.

Oh! Rum-seller, &c.

Oh! Rum seller, &c. The window towards the garden gate, That looked out to the west, Where that loved being used to wait Who made my home so blest, Was closed—the sombre curtains hung And no loved face was there: Nor voice the evening cong that sung. Or breathed the morning prayer.

Silence long 'round the happy home, Where once so light and free, My laughing children used to come, And dence upon my knee; And she who was that home's delight, PAMPHLETE, CARDS, In constant beauty shone, Around the chearful hearth-stone bright Now all was still and lone. Oh! Rum-seller, &c.

Yes, that loved wife has gone to rest, In death her heart is bound. The babes are sleeping on her breast, Beneath you grassy mound; And I am wandering lone and strange, No master of my will,-My home, my happy home is changed, To a hut behind the still.

When we read the infuriate appeals of men devoid of every principle of Honor, of Courage, of Hamanity, inciting their tellowcreatures, more easily impressed, but more deludable to scenes of blood, of carnage and of self-sacrifice, under the holy name of Patriotism, we cannot check the judignant blood that rushes to our cheek, or restrain the voice of denunciation against such miserable tricksters. These reflections and remarks are colled forth by the advertisement of a P. M.
